

It's Going Nicely.
Count the Fights.
Soon They Separate.
How About Money.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE
(Copyright, 1921.)

Well, Mr. Chairman, and gentlemen, the loving conference at Washington is progressing as well as could be expected. Not more than six or seven new international animosities have been brought to a head by the conference.

To know what happens read all the news articles and strike an average. Reporters try to give facts. Pay little attention to editorial writers. Those gentlemen start with a theory and spend the rest of the time trying to vindicate it.

Glance over a newspaper that thinks it's a League of Nations paper. On one page in one edition of the New York Times you get these lines in big type:

Italy jealous of France.
Secret propaganda calls Japan victims.

Accuses Great Britain and America.
Japan must submit or fight back.

Curzon warns France, headed for disaster.
Chinese accused to press claims.

Turn over, please, and read, in a cable from London: "Aksa Wells to stop anti-French cables."

Wells came here just bubbling over with peace. "Peace or chaos" was his motto. He heard one speech by Briand and promptly changed his cry to:

France is planning a war with England. And Northcliffe's Daily Mail, which can see a war as far ahead as anybody, cables:

"Wells, if you don't stop writing so bitterly about France we'll stop printing your articles."

It is, however, a useful conference. From it all Americans, including the President, may learn that the only nation we can count on, the only nation with which we should have any intimate relations, outside of commerce and friendship, is the United States.

Briand has gone home. His message was brief and plain: "We have met Germany several times. Napoleon pulled her teeth, but we met her again in 1870. You other nations will not promise to fight with us if we come again, so we are going to keep ready for it." The French are practical.

The other delegates will all go home, probably by the middle of December, and nothing will have been done, except to reveal on this continent the hatreds blazoring and smoldering in Europe. The French intend to kill their enemy neighbor Germany, economically as well as in a military sense.

This is shown by the order of a French general to destroy German factories that employ 200,000 workmen and turn those men out to starve. The excuse for the destruction is that the factories to be torn down by men that work in them might be converted by the Germans into manufacturing arms and munitions.

Every factory could be used in that way, as we learned in the war.

But, as the French fable says, "The argument of the strong is always the best," and France now has the strength. She will not be thwarted, if she can help it, in her plan to destroy the neighbor that she dreads.

France is practical, and, having put behind her all possibility of conciliating her great enemy by clemency, her alternative is that enemy's complete destruction.

England, seeing in Germany only a manufacturing, trading rival, does not want her killed, only half killed, stupefied, while England picks up trade. Hence the new treaty between England and France. "I don't want in middle Europe the decaying carcasses of two great nations, Germany and Austria. It's bad for Europe's health and it's playing the game for Bolshevik Russia." So says England.

Japan has discovered, to her disgust, that England in public is as proud of her little brown friend as she is in private. Japan is big and important as next door neighbor to India. But the U. S. A. is bigger and more important as next door neighbor to Canada, and especially as the nation with money to lend and money to buy goods. Japan, newly elected a member of the International Club of the World, finds that there is a clique within the club membership; she is not in it, and that displeases her.

Italy suspects France, and her reasons, on the surface at least, are just as good as France's reasons for suspecting Germany. For one invasion of France by Germany, there have been half a dozen invasions of Italy by France. Caesar, it is true, began it, when he dragged Verconcorix behind his chariot. But that does not console Italy. She knows that the art works you admire in Paris, including some fine horses, used to be in Italy. She does not like France's army of a million men, just as useful for a trip over the Alps or through the tunnel, as for a march beyond the Rhine. There are hatred and suspicion apt to be long-lived.

It will be over soon and more interesting things will claim your attention. If anything real happens, it will happen to this country. The delegates came to see

WARSHIP RAIDED AS RUM RUNNER

TARS HIDE LIQUOR IN NAVY MINE SWEEPER

Red Wing, Just Returned From Cuba, Is Boarded in Portsmouth Harbor.

PORTSMOUTH, Va., Nov. 26.—United States warships as rum runners is the latest.

Prohibition enforcement officers swooped down on the former Gloucester fishing vessel, now the mine sweeper Red Wing, as she lay at the naval base this morning and placed armed guards over a sizeable cargo of good liquor, which was cleverly secreted all over the crew's quarters.

Boys Ready for Christmas.

The Red Wing is just back from Cuban waters and the boys brought home a goodly supply of Christmas liquors, including the best Scotch and lots of Cuban rum.

An official investigation of the whole matter has been ordered by Rear Admiral Andrews, commanding the naval district.

There is a strong naval guard around the vessel and nobody is allowed to leave or to board her.

Navy Officers Act.

This action of the naval authorities followed that of the prohibition officers after several members of the crew had attempted to smuggle the liquor ashore.

SALES TAX ARBUCKLE WILL BRING PROSPERITY TO BE BARED

Congressmen, Guests of William Randolph Hearst, to Get Full Light on Levies.

By Universal Service.

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 25.—The Canadian public is entirely satisfied with the operations of the sales tax in the dominion. Best proof of this is the fact that a change in prevailing methods of taxation here has not been made an issue in one of the bitterest political fights in the history of Canada, which will be decided in a general election on December 6.

Seen Way To Release Securities.

Keen students of economic conditions in the Canadian capital further express the belief that the sales tax in American tax methods it is held by Canadian officials, will the billions of dollars now tied up in tax-exempt securities in the United States be released for industry.

Indorsement of the sales tax by such eminent American financial and industrial authorities as Judge Elbert H. Gary, chairman of the board of directors, United States Steel Corporation, and Otto H. Kahn, well-known banker and economist, is regarded as indication of a steady trend of American opinion. These Canadian convictions will be borne home forcibly upon the United States Congressional delegation visiting Canada by special Pullman train as guests of William Randolph Hearst, during the week of November 27.

S. G. B. Greene, president of the Ottawa Board of Trade, head of an industrial organization with branches in all parts of the Dominion and one of the advisers of Canadian officials on economic questions, outlined the operation of the Canadian sales tax for Universal Service today.

To Welcome Hearst Party.

Mr. Greene has been selected by local officials to represent the business of the Dominion capital and the Canadian authorities in welcoming the Congressional sales tax delegation to Ottawa.

In collaboration with Sir James A. Lougheed, acting prime minister, he will confer with members of the delegation Thursday, December 1, in the senate committee rooms of the parliament buildings.

Either Sir Henry Drayton, minister of finance, or delegated Canadian tax authorities will sit in at these conferences to explain to Congressmen and Senators just how the sales tax operates.

Mr. Greene said:

"The Canadian sales tax has worked out in a most satisfactory manner, and I have no doubt will be found equally proficient if it is applied to the United States, where the greater business turnover will

HOUSEKEEPER AND FILM FOLK CALLED TO TESTIFY—DEFENSE ATTACKS EVIDENCE.

By ELLIS H. MARTIN. International News Service.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 26.—The defense of Roscoe ("Fatty") Arbuckle today turned its guns on the fingerprint evidence adduced by the State to support its charge of manslaughter against the film comedian.

Charge Called Ridiculous.

Several experts were summoned. They were to testify in brief that the claim of Dr. E. O. Heinrichs that he had discovered an impression on the hand of Virginia Rappe with that of Arbuckle superimposed over it on the door to room 1219 at the St. Francis Hotel, where the fatal party was held, was "ridiculous."

While the main barrage today was to be directed at this point, the defense planned to keep up a supporting fire of evidence to that given yesterday by Irene Morgan, trained nurse, and Harry B. Barker, one time "sweetheart" of the dead girl, that on many occasions she suffered great pain from attacks of bladder trouble and on these occasions tore off her clothing in her paroxysms.

The Saturday half holiday prevented the defense from closing its case as planned today. However, Gavin McNab announced as he went into court this morning that, barring the unexpected, the defense would rest some time Monday.

Barker a Surprise Witness.

Whether Arbuckle will take the stand remains to be announced. While his attorneys give the impression that it has been decided to have him take the stand, it may be regarded as doubtful.

The surprise witness of the entire case was Barker. It revealed a romance of the early days of Virginia Rappe in Chicago. Barker, who now has a ranch in California and a real estate business in Gary, Ind., was then "on the road." He met Virginia Rappe, he said, in 1914, when she was but thirteen years of age—and a "warm friendship sprang up which lasted four and a half years."

Barker "made Chicago often," and when he did he "went with Virginia."

When her grandmother lived, she usually accompanied them to dinner and to the theater, he said. He described dinners ranging from an Italian restaurant, where Virginia partook of too much red wine, to the Lasalle Hotel, where he met her the last time he saw her in Chicago. He declared he had seen her the last two months before her death.

Severely Cross-Examined.

At that time, he admitted on cross-examination, "she was looking her old self, always bright, high spirited, and full of fun."

Barker underwent a grilling cross-examination and will likely be questioned further today.

The State may return to the stand also Miss Morgan. She faintly while under cross-examination yesterday, but despite her weakness, held to her story and sprang a sensation by intimating detectives for the prosecution had attempted to prevent her testimony.

Considerable speculation reigned today over the action of the State in subpoenaing Miss Catherine Fitzgerald, of Los Angeles. It is understood Miss Fitzgerald is the beautiful housekeeper in charge of Arbuckle's palatial Los Angeles home—until Mrs. Arbuckle arrived. It is believed she was summoned to be used as a rebuttal witness in the event Arbuckle takes the stand.

The prosecution is understood to believe she could relate stories of gay parties at Arbuckle's home if she cared to do so. They, however, have not stated their purpose in issuing the subpoena which also calls for the appearance of five others from the Los Angeles movie colony.

PROPOSAL EXPECTED TO SETTLE PROBLEM

Intimation Conveyed to Hughes British Look for America to Take Initiative.

By International News Service.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—Reappearance of the question of allied debt cancellation at the Washington armament conference resulted today in the International News Service obtaining an authoritative statement that "the intimation has been conveyed to Secretary of State Hughes that in no case will Great Britain make any proposals for the cancellation of any part or the whole of the allied debt."

British Attitude Defined.

"Great Britain's attitude is that she will pay her debt in full, but if any proposal with regards to the allied debts is advanced by the United States, as is considered likely, Great Britain will receive such a suggestion with fullest sympathy and proceed to make practical moves toward reconstruction of Europe," it was officially stated.

The above statement coincides with the renewal of discussion in daily and weekly newspapers here urging a world economic conference.

Tokyo Press Launches Attack on Conference Plans to Reduce Navies

By DUKE N. PARRY. International News Service.

TOKYO, Nov. 26.—First out-and-out attacks on the action of the conference on limitation of armament appeared in the Tokyo press today, with the Nichi Nichi and the Asahi Shimbun as the leaders.

The Nichi Nichi asks why Secretary Hughes consulted Great Britain's delegates—Balfour and Beatty—regarding naval reductions prior to taking up the matter with the Japanese delegates.

"We question the appropriateness of the heads of the British and American delegations conferring on vital questions privately," said the Nichi Nichi. "It is possible Secretary Hughes hopes to use Great Britain to urge upon Japan compliance with the American wishes. We do not believe this to be true, but if so it will bring on terrible results."

"Great Britain led other countries in accepting the Washington program for no other reason than a desire to win American sympathy. Under ordinary circumstances Great Britain would not allow America to interfere in Irish affairs. Britain is succeeding in her diplomacy to win America, but she is paying high for it."

British Back American Experts Against Japan On 10-10-6 Naval Ratio

By International News Service.

After thorough consideration of objections raised by Japan, British naval experts are still in accord with American experts, and are ready to support the American view with respect to the 10-10-6 ratio for capital ships, it was announced in semi-official British quarters today.

The work of examining data concerning the capital ship ratio proposed under the Hughes plan virtually has been completed so far as the British and American experts are concerned, it was said. Further study will be made by the British however, of the question of replacements, which they believe to be of great importance to the effective working out of the plan. The Japanese experts have not com-

what could be done about their debts, about canceling the old debts and making new debts. On one point, and no other, Europe is unanimous—AMERICA SHOULD NOT ASK TO BE PAID.
